UPDATED AGAIN 12:32 PM EST -- Geneva Talks (Live Updates in Progress)

HAL TURNER | WORLD | FEBRUARY 26, 2026 | HITS: 6677

Iran and the United States were conducting indirect talks in Geneva Switzerland today, but things are too quiet.

The talks are viewed as a last chance for diplomacy, as America has gathered a fleet of aircraft and warships to the Middle East to pressure Tehran into a deal.

EN

Mideast envoy Steve Witkoff is passing messages with Iranian ter Abbas Araghchi in an effort to convince his country to halt its enrichment of uranium, a key step to building a nuclear bomb, and curtail or stop its production of long-range missiles. The president's son-in-law, Jared Kushner, is also in attendance.

The talks lasted some three hours before the American delegation left the site. Iranian state television reported that the talks would resume after a break.

UPDATE 11:56 AM EST --

I have just confirmed that the talks WILL RESUME at 12:30 PM eastern US time, which is 16:30 UTC.

MORE:

14 more F-35 Fighter Jets were ordered to take-off from Hill Air Force Base in Utah, to head to Europe/Middle East, shortly after the initial Break of the Geneva Talks. It seems to many observers that if the talks were going well, there would be no reason to send even more Fighter Jets.

EVEN MORE:

The USS Gerald R. Ford has departed the US Naval Base in Souda Bay, Greece and is heading east in the Mediterranean Sea.

12:17 PM EST --

This Just in from Iran:

High-ranking Iranian official, responding via Al Jazeera to misleading American leaks:

Our proposal emphasizes that our uranium enrichment is a sovereign right and offers a temporary freeze on enrichment for a limited period.

Our proposal for a solution in Geneva does not include any ideas regarding our missile systems and defense programs.

The principle of zero enrichment forever, dismantling nuclear facilities, and transferring the uranium stockpile is completely rejected.

12:32 PM EST -- President Trump will gather all the Principals in the White House at 3:00 PM tomorrow, Friday 27 February 2026.

I think Iran in an act of good faith during these negotiations should prepare a barge and a drone boat to tow it. On the barge, they should put a mountain of toilette paper and offer it to the Ford aircraft carrier. It would be a token of peace and a recognition that some things are more important than nuclear weapons.

The funny part is, what does the US have to do with Iran if it's not a direct thread to the US nor the allies. And at this point, how much of an ally actually is Israel? I would say none.

I'm sure the Iranians appreciate the opportunity to negotiate indirectly with their Zionist adversaries.

Duplicitous low lifes unable to comfortably make eye contact and have a conversation with someone in a 'diplomatic' situation as their nonsense becomes immediately evident shortly after everyone has a seat.

Probably the real reason that the dynamic duo won't meet FTF with the Iranians is because of likelihood of having their negotiating partner come across the table and beat the living shit out of them, as can be expected from any reasonable man seeking fairness and justice when facing off with pure evil.

Assuming the American delegation are briefed and know all they need to know and what to expect.
Iran is pissing around in my view, probably listening to whispers in the ear from the Biden/Obama tribe.
It all connects.

"Indirect talks..."
What is this the 4th grade?
And don't we have an official ambassador or secretary of state that is supposed to handle situations like this? Serious situations?
Is any agreement with Witcoff or Cushner even legal or binding?

Have you ever seen such a clown show of irregularities and botched protocol before like this?

Maby we DO live in a corporate fascist state where law and protocol is thrown out the window for "deals" instead of treaties benefiting corporate interests above American citizens interests.

It's no longer just about uranium enrichment, the goalposts have shifted dramatically. Marco Rubio's recent statement highlights that Iran's flat refusal to even discuss its ballistic missile program is a "big, big problem" for any potential agreement.
This expansion of demands suggests the U.S. isn't solely focused on curbing nuclear capabilities anymore but now insists on addressing missiles, which Iran sees as essential to its defense and refuses to negotiate. It gives the strong impression that a real deal isn't the true objective, instead, the rhetoric and conditions seem geared more toward confrontation or war if Iran doesn't yield.

In essence, diplomacy looks increasingly stacked against success, with missiles now a non-negotiable red line, tilting the path toward escalation rather than compromise.
